

Eastern Wyoming College

Archaeology and Anthropology Introduction to Biological Anthropology

Biological Anthropology is the study of the physical aspects of humanity. Biological Anthropologists study the human body, and how we have adapted through time into bio-cultural beings. Fields of Biological Anthropology include Forensics, Paleoanthropology, Primatology, Evolution, Pathology, Paleopathology, and Human Genetics.

ANTH 1100 + L001 – Introduction to Biological Anthropology – 4 credit hours

Counts as a Lab Science course at EWC, transfers as a
USP Physical and Natural World Course at UW.

Fall 2024 – Mondays and Wednesdays – Lab 2:00-
2:55pm – Class 3:00-4:15
Archaeology and Anthropology Lab – Tebbet 208

Dr. Steve Howard, PhD
Archaeology and Anthropology
307-534-2964
showard@ewc.wy.edu

Eastern Wyoming College
3200 West C Street
Torrington, Wyoming 82240
307-532-8200